Kye Steve Lee's family greeted him following the College of Law hooding ceremony on May 16.

From the Dean. . .

For those of us who live our lives on an academic calendar, life begins again each fall. Each new school year brings another round of fresh faces with high hopes and aspirations. It's an exciting time of year.

The past few months have been spent planning for what I believe will be one of the most exciting years at the College of Law. The summer saw the beginning of a new era as William E. "Brit" Kirwan took the helm as the 12th president of The Ohio State University. He has brought with him a fresh focus for moving the university forward. We at the College of Law share his vision for higher education at Ohio State, and have discussed the continued need to strive for excellence. We agree on the importance of making O.S.U. accessible for all and see the significance of the College of Law's role as a resource for those in the legal profession. I am looking forward to working with President Kirwan, and I have high expectations for his presidency.

This fall marks the beginning of my second five-year term as your dean. It has been a privilege to guide the premier law school in the Buckeye State, and I am very enthusiastic about the future of the College of Law. We are building on what is already an outstanding program; our goal for the future is to continue to enhance the education we provide and to build a community of students, faculty, and staff who are committed to producing quality work.

Critical to the learning process at the College of Law is the interchange of ideas. Last spring, the College of Law and the Ohio State Law Journal co-sponsored a national symposium to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision in Regents of the University of California v. Bakke and to explore the future of affirmative action in higher education. Outstanding scholars from around the nation challenged participants to consider the role of affirmative action in higher education and examined the role of the judicial system in affirmative action policy.

Constant and vigorous intellectual interchange is a significant part of the academic enterprise. That is why we encourage symposia, like the Bakke conference, and endowed lecture series like the Frank R. Strong Law forum, held in February, and the Schwartz Lecture on Dispute Resolution, presented each April.

This year also saw the kick-off of our new Children's Rights Clinic and we are presently planning another nationally celebrated conference, this time focusing on the effects of welfare reform on children. Already many faculty, students, and staff are combining their efforts to plan stimulating sessions. We hope for a repeat of the spring conference, where students learned that difficult and controversial issues can be discussed rationally and respectfully.

The lifeblood of the College is the continuing fellowship of our friends and alumni. As we plan for the coming year, I look forward to renewing friendships with many of you. Whether it is to attend a reunion, to judge a moot court round, or to interview our students, I encourage each of you to visit the College of Law. I hope you, too, share my enthusiasm and optimism for what the coming year can bring to the College of Law.

The practice of law, playwright John

Mortimer opined facetiously, requires "common sense and relatively clean fingernails." William Saxbe '48, already well-endowed with common sense, entered the profession, in part, so he could wash his hands of manual labor.

"After earning a bachelor's degree from Ohio State in 1940, I served during World War II as a major and a pilot in the Air Corps," he explains. "Afterwards, when I returned home to Mechanicsburg, the only job I could find was as a garage mechanic. I'd come home so dirty and greasy that my wife would cry."

Who is Richard?

Former U.S. Attorney General William Saxbe '48 and his wife, Dolly, recently moved back to the family home in Mechanicsburg.

Saxbe toyed with the idea of going into the cattle business... After talking with friends and family, he decided on a political career.

Saxbe toyed with the idea of going into the cattle business, like his father, or studying to become an Episcopalian minister. After talking with friends and family, he decided on a political career. "I needed a job, and I didn't like the way things were going in the world," he says. "I took a day off from the garage and went to see Dean Stradley, who had been my undergraduate advisor at Ohio State, and told him I was thinking of going into politics. He replied, 'Well, you'd better get over there and enroll in law school.'"

Saxbe started law school in 1946, teaming up with several other veterans for a study group that helped get five of the six of them get through. "We all had families and jobs but we studied together very diligently," he recalls. "Some of us still see each other."

While enrolled in law school, 29-year-old Saxbe was elected to the Ohio House of Representatives in 1946, becoming one of the youngest persons in the state to hold public office. It was the first step in a long and extraordinarily distinguished political career. With characteristic modesty, Saxbe says, "People think it's hard to get into politics. All you've got to do is show up. My advice to lawyers who want to become candidates is to get involved at the level where you're useful.

"Too often, a young lawyer gets involved with party politics, is asked to do some manual work and drops out," he adds. "Or else, after achieving some success as a lawyer, feels the party should select him. Those willing to come into politics at the grass roots and work their ways up will be welcomed with open arms."

That was certainly the case for Saxbe. After serving four terms in the Ohio House, he was elected to the posts of Ohio Attorney General (three terms) and United States Senator (one term), before being appointed U.S. Attorney General—the fourth and last to serve during Richard Nixon's second term. He was appointed Ambassador to India in 1975.

On current relations between India and Pakistan, Saxbe says: "I was in India in 1971 and met with Mrs. Gandhi just before the outbreak of the short war with Pakistan. Four days later I met with Pakistan's leader. He told me, 'That woman is not going to cow me.' This attitude is pervasive and that's why the nuclear threat [between these countries] is so great. India's recent nuclear test was a message of strength to Pakistan and Pakistan's test was a way of waving the sword back. I'm deeply worried."

On his dealings with Richard Nixon: "He lied to me. I asked him directly if he was involved in the coverup and he assured me he was not. I don't know if anybody completely understands what motivated him . . . Watergate was an American tragedy."

Saxbe, who turned 82 in June, has accumulated a lifetime of exciting memories which, when prodded, he will share. But he's clearly a man who lives in the present. When asked what he enjoys most about life these days, he replied: "I enjoy the work I do. Up until this past year, I was the trustee of a large family trust. I continue to serve as independent special counsel for the Central States

Teamsters Pension and Health Welfare Funds, a court-appointed post I've held since 1983. At that time, several of the trustees had been arrested, and the pension fund was suffering. I was brought in to help keep them out of trouble, and I've missed only one meeting in 15 years. They've got good trustees today, and I'm real proud of them."

He also enjoys travel and recently took his two sons and a grandson on a trip to Uruguay. He and his wife, Dolly, who have moved 26 times during the past 58 years, last year bought back their old family home in Mechanicsburg and spent last summer settling in. "We've got 15 acres here right on Little Darby Creek," Saxbe says. "We have cattle like we used to."

He credits his training in the law as among the most important influences on his life. "The experience of law school and the people I met there were interesting and challenging," he explains, adding that another major influence has been his wife, Dolly.

"Obviously, I couldn't have done all the things I've done and enjoyed life as much as I have if I hadn't had a wife who put up with me all these years" he says fondly. "Somebody asked her the other day how we'd managed to live together happily for 58 years."

Saxbe pauses to laugh heartily before reporting his wife's reply: "She said, 'It's because we're both in love with the same man.'" □

Who is Prevailing Under the Americans with Disabilities Act?

The tenth anniversary of the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) will be marked on July 26, 2000. The ADA is Congress' most ambitious effort to address the discrimination problems faced by some 43 million disabled Americans. I am interested in analyzing the results and reasoning from the first decade of cases brought under the ADA.

My preliminary evaluation of a selection of employment-related ADA cases is that defendant-employers are inappropriately prevailing in a disproportionate number of cases through a grant of summary judgment or dismissal before trial. This view, however, is contrary to the views expressed in the popular media. For example, columnist Ruth Shalit reported in The New Republic that the ADA has created a "lifelong buffet of perks, special breaks and procedural protections" for people with questionable disabilities.¹ Although one can, of course, find examples of victorious plaintiffs, preliminary data suggests that the overwhelming trend is in the other direction. The Sixth Circuit, for example, has reported substantive decisions in 58 ADA cases that are retrievable on Westlaw on-line research database (including unpublished opinions) since the statute was enacted in 1990. Of these cases, the Court of Appeals affirmed a dismissal (10 cases) or grant of summary judgment (39 cases) for the defendant-employer for a total of 49 cases (84 percent). In two other cases, the appeals court affirmed a verdict that had been rendered in favor of the defendant-employer. In one additional case, the district court had granted summary judgment for the plaintiff and sent the case to the jury on the issue of relief.

The jury awarded both compensatory and punitive damages. On appeal, the Sixth Circuit reversed the grant of summary judgment for the plaintiff and ruled that the trial court should have granted summary judgment for the defendant-employer. Thus, defendants obtained clear victories in 52 of 58 cases appealed to the Sixth Circuit (90 percent of the cases).

The remaining six cases each involve a district court's grant of summary judgment for the defendant-employer. The Sixth Circuit reversed that decision, sending the Professor Colker is a nationally-recognized scholar on the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). She is the author of the first casebook on this subject: The Law of Disability Discrimination (now in its 2nd edition with B.P. Tucker). She was the keynote speaker at a disability discrimination conference held last year in Brisbane, Australia and, most recently, spoke at a continuing legal education session for the judges of the Eleventh Circuit on this subject. In March of this year, some of you may have heard her on your car radio, commenting on the ADA for the nationally syndicated show, All Things Considered. In the following article, Professor Colker summarizes her current research on the ADA, arguing that the courts may be misusing summary judgment devices under the ADA. Her empirical research is being supported by the Socio-Legal Center at the College of Law.

issue of liability to the jury on remand. There is, of course, no guarantee that the plaintiff will prevail in any of these cases, only that the case will now go to the jury. Thus, only one of the 58 appealed cases involved situations where plaintiff had won at the trial court and, in that one case, the Sixth Circuit reversed the verdict that was entered for plaintiff. These 58 cases do not suggest that the ADA is a "lifelong buffet of perks" for plaintiffs.

The 37 ADA district court cases involving substantive issues in the Sixth Circuit that are available on Westlaw and were decided since January 1, 1996 also support this trend. (Few of these cases are in my appellate database since they were decided so recently at the trial court level.) Defendants filed motions for summary judgment in 33 cases, which the district court granted in 24 cases (73 percent). Defendants moved for dismissal on the pleadings in the remaining four cases, which the district court granted in three cases (75 percent). Thus, defendants prevailed in roughly three-fourths of the 37 cases decided before district courts in which decisions were available on Westlaw. It is unlikely that plaintiffs will prevail in the remaining 10 cases; the judge has simply allowed them to proceed to trial. Not one case available during this two-year period resulted in a favorable verdict for plaintiff.

Of course, some people might respond that the defendant-friendly disposition in these cases is reflective of frivolous litigation. A senior editor at the Reader's Digest, for example, has asserted that plaintiffs "have used the ADA to trigger an avalanche of frivolous suits clogging federal courts."² Both general and specific considerations suggest otherwise. First, one must consider that most lawyers only take ADA cases on a contingent fee basis. They certainly would not agree to appeal a case that they believed had little merit. Thus, other than the few pro se cases in this group, one would not expect a case to get to the appellate stage unless it had some possible merit. (Only two of the 37 district court cases in the Sixth Circuit sample were brought pro se.)

Second, a close examination of these Sixth Circuit cases reflects that they often involve contested issues of fact, which are proper jury fodder. A good example is Estate of Mauro v. Borgess Medical Center, 137 F3d 398 (6th Circuit 1998) in which the key issue was whether a surgical technician's HIV status posed a "significant" risk to the health or safety of others. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant-employer on this issue and the Sixth Circuit affirmed in a divided opinion. In dissent, Judge Boggs argued that the evaluation of what risk is "significant" belongs to the jury not the judge:

"The ADA is Congress' most ambitious effort to address the discrimination problems faced by some 43 million disabled Americans."

More than a few people refuse to fly, though commercial airlines are said to be safe compared to other modes of transportation. There may be some people who refuse to cross streets. Others go bungee jumping. So there is an inescapable normative component to the judgment of whether the chance that even a great peril will come to pass is "significant" or not.

Moreover, Judge Boggs pointed out in dissent that there were genuine issues of material fact to be resolved at trial. He questioned whether medication could reduce plaintiff's viral load to virtually zero and whether plaintiff was likely to use recommended barrier precautions to greatly reduce the risk of harm to the patient.

The lone plaintiff victory in an appealed Sixth Circuit case, which was reversed on appeal, also lends support to my argument that courts are misusing the summary judgment device. Again, the complainant was a man who was HIV-positive. He worked as a produce worker at a grocery store and was required to undergo a medical examination out of the employer's fear that he could spread HIV-infection into the food supply. Convinced that the defendants had violated the ADA as a matter of law, the judge granted summary judgment for the plaintiff and sent the question of damages to the jury. The jury then awarded plaintiff, Mr. Sharp, $55,000 in compensatory and punitive damages. The Sixth Circuit reversed and directed the district court to grant summary judgment to the defendant-employer on remand. EEOC v. Prevo's Market, 135 F3d 1089 (6th Circuit 1998).

The Court of Appeals correctly concluded that it was inappropriate for the trial court to have granted summary judgment for the plaintiff. The legal issue was whether the request for a medical examination was "job-related" which, in turn, required a determination of whether Mr. Sharp's health status might pose a "significant risk" to the health or safety of others if he cut himself while preparing produce. But it was also an error for the Court of Appeals to order that summary judgment be entered for the defendant on remand. There was conflicting testimony on the degree of risk that Mr. Sharp posed at the workplace. It is the jury's function to evaluate such conflicting evidence and, in particular, to assess the credibility of Mr. Sharp with respect to the steps he would take to insure that he did not impose a risk at the workplace.

Admittedly, the kinds of factual questions that arise in these ADA cases are not pure questions of fact, such as the speed at which a defendant was driving his vehicle at the time of an accident. Instead, they involve normative factual judgments such as whether an accommodation is "reasonable," whether plaintiff's physical impairment "substantially" limits him in a major life activity, or whether the risk that plaintiff presents at the workplace to others is a "significant" risk. Nonetheless, I would agree with Judge Boggs that these kinds of mixed questions of fact and law should go to the jury because there is an "inescapable normative component to the judgment" which is best resolved by a jury, not a judge. This is not a situation where Congress or an agency has codified an explicit and clear standard to interpret these ambiguous norms as a matter of law. Instead, we need juries to interpret these terms in light of their accepted meaning within society.

If my final research reveals that the preliminary pattern that I found to exist in the Sixth Circuit is widespread, we would have a troubling example of the misuse of the summary judgment device. It is too early for me to know why this device might be misused. Maybe judges don't like jury trials, distrust the jury's ability to decide mixed questions of fact and law, or have a subconscious concern about runaway juries. Congress has decided that ADA cases can be decided before juries and has attempted to deal with the runaway jury problem by capping compensatory and punitive damages with the passage of the 1991 Civil Rights Act. But Congress cannot readily force judges to send ADA cases to juries in the first place. As three co-authors of a monograph commissioned for the Federal Judicial Center noted, "Not only do courts often fail to explicate reasoning of this aspect of summary judgment, but the question arises in the shadowy middle ground between fact and law where decisions may be too fact-driven or be entitled to too much precedential weight."³ Thus, if I correctly surmise there is a problem with the proper allocation of duties between judge and jury, it may be difficult to suggest a mechanism that will solve the problem.

I look forward to completing my research project to see if summary judgment is being granted on behalf of defendant-employers as frequently as my preliminary data suggests. I sincerely hope that I can report back in a year that plaintiffs have a meaningful opportunity of prevailing in suits filed under the ADA. So far, my data suggests otherwise. □

Funds for Professorship in Memory of Joanne Murphy to be Raised

Joanne Wharton Murphy '58 embodied life at the College of Law. From her days as a student in the late 1950s to the last classes she taught months before her death on October 20, 1997, she lived and breathed Ohio State and, in particular, the College of Law. Very few people at the law school were not touched by her life. She was not only a graduate and a teacher, she was administrator, cheerleader, and friend.

"Joanne was such a special person," said Dean Gregory H. Williams. "She touched so many people in a profound way that it is impossible to catalogue the impact she had on the generations of students, staff and faculty who passed through the College of Law."

Assistant Dean Emeritus for Alumni and External Relations at the time of her death, Joanne was recognized with the Distinguished Service Award during the spring quarter commencement at the University.

A special fund is being developed to establish a professorship in her memory. It will be the first such professorship at the University to honor a staff person.

"Jo would have loved the idea of a living memorial," noted her husband of 25 years, Professor Earl F. Murphy. "She was not the sort to want a big monument in the cemetery."

Alumni, friends and family are laying the foundation for the success of this fund. Several reunion classes, including Joanne's, are stepping forward with commitments. Ward is leading his class effort.

"Jody left a marvelous legacy of hundreds of friends across the country whom she helped through difficult times in law school and as they were developing their practices," he recalled. "To many, she was the heart of the law school and its helping hand."

A total of $750,000 is necessary to establish a permanent endowment for the professorship. If you would like more information about how you can be involved, please contact Tom Hoffman, Director of Development, at (614) 292-0601. □

Director of Legal Writing Mary Beth Beazley is the co-author of "The Process and the Product: A Bibliography of Scholarship about Scholarship," which will appear in the next issue of the Mercer Law Review.

Along with OSU law graduates Justice Evelyn Lundberg Stratton '78, of the Ohio Supreme Court, and Solicitor General Jeffrey Sutton '90, of the Ohio Attorney General's Office, Ms. Beazley presented a CLE on Persuasive Legal Writing in late May.

Ms. Mary Beth Beazley

This summer, Ms. Beazley was:

- installed as President of the Legal Writing Institute at its Conference in Ann Arbor, Michigan. She'll also do three presentations, and be part of a plenary panel on the self-graded draft.
- participated in a week-long Colloquium on Legal Discourse at the University of Notre Dame Law School.
- at the ABA Annual Meeting in Toronto in August. She participated in a workshop on collaborating with lawyers and judges to help develop skills curricula. The workshop was co-sponsored by the ABA Skills Training Committee and the ABA Communication Skills Committee.
- Led a CLE presentation during August as part of the "Bridge the Gap" seminar sponsored by the Ohio CLE Institute.

Professor Doug Berman made the rounds of local media to discuss the death penalty and Wilford Berry, the Ohio man who received the death penalty in a Cleveland murder and has asked that his case not be appealed. He appeared on WOSU on February 27, on WCMH-Channel 4 (Columbus) and the Ohio News Network on March 3. He also discussed, on local public radio, the proposed Ohio bill concerning the involuntary commitment of sex offenders.

Professor Berman has also been selected to receive the Thurgood Marshall Award from the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, which honors attorneys who "have contributed their invaluable time, resources, and energies to the representation of human beings under a sentence of death across this country."

Professor Dan Chow has received approval for a one-year extension of his unpaid leave of absence to continue to serve as senior legal counsel for Procter and Gamble's China operations. In addition to the work he has been doing this year with the company's joint ventures, he will also be heading a special project working with the Chinese government on intellectual property issues.

Professor Ruth Colker received the 1997 Myers Center Award for the Study of Human Rights in North America for outstanding work on intolerance in North America. The award was based on her book, Hybrid: Bisexuals, Multiracials, and Other Misfits under American Law.

Professor Colker has also been speaking about the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) on a variety of platforms, including:

- the Columbus Dispatch, where her piece on the Casey Martin case (PGA golf) was published on the op-ed page on February 19.
- National Public Radio, where on March 30, she gave an "ADA scorecard" with regard to oral argument in Abbott v. Bragdon (whether the Americans with Disabilities Act covers an HIV-positive patient who sought dental treatment). Hear the interview on NPR's web site: <http://www.npr.org/programs/atc/archives/1998/980330.atc.html>.
- at a Judicial Training Conference on St. Simons Island, Georgia, where she spoke in April to the judges (both district court and appellate) on the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Health Lawyer, a publication of the ABA Health Law Section, will publish an article by Professor Sharon L. Davies in its next issue. The article considers how the Supreme Court's recent grant of certiorari in a firearms case, Bryan v. United States, may impact the debate currently raging in the medical industry over the mens rea requirement of the Medicare and Medicaid anti-kickback statute. Professor Davies will also speak about health care fraud at the Annual Health Law Teachers Conference sponsored by the American Society of Law, Medicine and Ethics.

Professor Davies participated in the Midwestern People of Color Legal Scholarship Conference at Capital University Law School on March 27 to 29. She commented on a work in progress by criminal law professor Robin Magee of Hamline University School of Law.

Professor Katherine Hunt Federle has joined the editorial advisory board of the International Journal of Children's Rights. The Journal is a peer-reviewed publication with a commitment to publish the best of academic writing in the area of children's rights from a variety of scholars.

During the 1998-99 academic year, Professor Howard Fink will be a visiting Professor at the University of San Diego School of Law. He visited once before in 1975. In January, his article will be published in the Indiana Law Journal Symposium on the Supplemental Jurisdiction of the Federal Courts. He and Professors Arthur Greenbaum and Charles Wilson have signed a contract with Lexis Law Publishers to produce a new volume entitled Fink, Greenbaum and Wilson's Guide to the Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure, to be published in early 1999 and annually thereafter.

Prof. Howard Fink

Prof. Arthur Greenbaum

With the attorneys from the law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis and Pogue, Professor Greenbaum is also co-authoring an on-line treatise on the Ohio law of professional responsibility. The treatise will be part of Cornell's American Legal Ethics Library, a state-by-state guide to professional responsibility. The work will appear on-line as part of Cornell's

Faculty News

Legal Information Institute. The work complements Professor Greenbaum's 1996 treatise, Lawyer's Guide to the Ohio Code of Professional Responsibility, published by West Publishing Company. Professor Greenbaum continues to serve on the Executive Committee of the Civil Procedure section of the Association of American Law Schools and will serve this year as Vice-chair of the Board of Trustees of the Ohio CLE Institute.

Professor Tom Gallanis will be a visiting faculty member at the University of Michigan Law School next fall. He will be teaching Trusts and Estates. He will return to Ohio State for the Spring 1999 semester.

Professor Sheldon W. Halpern and university Associate Legal Counsel and Adjunct Professor Steven McDonald gave several brown bag seminars recently for the University's Emerging Technologies Studio. They discussed copyright and intellectual property issues. Professor Halpern also discussed copyright issues at the Audio Description Conference sponsored by the OSU Theatre Research Institute.

Professor Louis A. Jacobs spoke at the annual convention of the National Employment Lawyers Association on June 26 in Monterey, California, in a presentation with University of California, Davis Law Professor Edward J. Imwinkelried on "Evidentiary Issues in Employment Discrimination Cases."

An article by Professor Timothy Jost comparing the role of the courts in health care coverage decisions in Germany, the United Kingdom, and the United States appeared recently in the Hastings International and Comparative Law Review. Two articles written by Professor Jost are scheduled to be published this summer:

- "Gesundheitsreform: Lehren aus amerikanischen Erfahrungen," will appear in Recht und Politik im Gesundheitswesen.
- "German Health Care Reform, the Next Steps," will appear in the Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law.

Professor Jost was the keynote speaker at a symposium in April at St. Louis University College of Law on medical necessity. He discussed the reasons why health care costs so much more in the United States than in other countries. At a May seminar at the same school, he discussed his work regarding financing pain management services under federal and state health care programs. June found Professor Jost traveling to Chile to examine health care reform in Chile. He also went to England in July to represent OSU at the American Society of Comparative Law meeting.

Professor Emeritus Joan M. Krauskopf '58 and her husband, Charlie, have settled in a mountain home in the pines near Prescott, Arizona. Her address is: 2355 Mountain Laurel, Prescott, AZ 86303.

Professor Deborah Merritt recently finished an empirical study of the relationship between research and teaching on law faculties; the study will appear in a Symposium on Research and Scholarship published by the Chicago-Kent Law Review. She delivered a paper based on that study at New York University Law School in March.

Professor Merritt has also been conducting an in-depth empirical study of the tort system in Franklin County, Ohio, with special emphasis on the impact of Ohio's recent tort reform statute. She has completed her analysis of jury verdicts (to be published later this year) and is collecting data on Franklin County settlements.

In June, Professor Merritt traveled to Ukraine to speak to judges of that nation's constitutional court. In July, she co-taught a course on Comparative Constitutional Law with Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. She also served as reporter for a week-long conference on International Human Rights held in Salzburg, Austria.

Professors Alan Michaels and John Quigley (separately and coincidentally) had letters to the editor published in the New York Times on Thursday, February 12. Professor Quigley's letter addressed the Times' "dubious" conclusion about the legality of a United States attack on Iraq. In his letter, Professor Michaels addressed a mischaracterization by the Times of the effect of a limited grant of immunity that Kenneth Starr might give to Monica Lewinsky.

"Employing the Law to Increase the Use of Mediation and to Encourage Direct and Early Negotiations," an article by Professor Nancy H. Rogers, was published in May by the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Professor Rogers wrote the article with Craig McEwen, a sociology professor at Bowdoin College. The article reflects research done on business disputing under a grant from the National Science Foundation. Professors Rogers and McEwen suggest that laws permitting courts to offer and compel participation in mediation also expand voluntary use of mediation. The article is part of a symposium on issues raised by the project to draft a uniform or model mediation law. Professors James Brudney and Laura Williams also contributed articles to the symposium issue.

The model/uniform mediation law drafting project has begun with provisions on confidentiality and mediation. Professor Rogers serves as reporter to interlocking drafting committees of a model/uniform statute under the auspices of the National Conference of Commissioners of Uniform State Laws and the American Bar Association Section on Dispute Resolution.

Assistant Dean Robert Solomon '88 and his wife, Dinessa, welcomed Allegra Rhea at 9:05 on Mother's Day morning (May 10)! At birth she weighed 6 pounds, 4 ounces and measured 19½ inches long.

Professor Peter Swire has spoken at a number of conferences in 1998 on topics concerning the Internet and privacy, including:

- "Offshore Banking, Privacy, and the Future of the Internet" at On-Line, Offshore '98; "Choice of Law and the Internet: European Developments" at a Southern Methodist University conference on Jurisdiction and the Internet;
- "Effects of the European Privacy Directive on Financial Services" at a conference on The Emerging Law of Cyberbanking and Electronic Commerce; and
- "Balancing Privacy with the Needs of the Private Sector" at a conference on Privacy Protection in a Global Networked Society sponsored by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development; and "Preventing Privacy Liability" at Computers, Freedom and Privacy '98.

An article by Professor John Quigley was published in the Harvard International Law Journal (Winter 1998, Vol. 39, No. 1, pp. 171-229). "Displaced Palestinians and a Right of Return" anticipates the negotiations between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization. Professor Quigley argues that the Palestinians who were displaced in 1948 from the territory that became Israel have the right under international law to return to their home area.

Prof. Vincene Verdun

Professor Vincene Verdun was interviewed on the Black Studies Broadcast Journal on WOSU on Sunday, February 22. She talked about the proposed Ohio anti-affirmative action legislation. She also spoke at the Western People of Color Scholarship Conference on March 8 and at The University of Washington—Faculty Colloquium on "The Presumption of Bias: A Look at the Law School Appointments Process."

Professor David Williams has had an active semester. He was:

- appointed to the Advisory Board of The Ronald Brown Foundation.
- named University Vice President for Urban and Community Affairs, as well as Student Affairs.
- named to the Editorial Board of The Business Lawyer.
- named to the Council of Student Affairs Executive Committee of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Prof. David Williams

Dean Williams Represents College of Law

Dean Gregory H. Williams has represented the College of Law in a variety of forums in the last few months. His activities include:

- speaking at the University of Pittsburgh Law School on February 17.
- serving as the keynote speaker at the Bridging the Gap conference at the University of Iowa on March 6.
- discussing his book, Life on the Color Line, with faculty and students at Mount Carmel School of Nursing in Columbus on March 13.
- visiting with College of Law alumni in Florida in March.
- sharing how the College prepares students through the trial law practicums on April 23 with the Franklin County Trial Lawyers.
- observing the operation of Harvard Law School as a member of the ABA accrediting survey team on April 27-29.
- honoring College of Law graduates who serve on the Ohio Supreme Court and the Ohio Court of Appeals during the Alumni Breakfast during the Ohio State Bar Association annual meeting in Dayton on May 7.

Dean Gregory H. Williams welcomed Alain deKeghel, the Consul General of France, right, on April 17. DeKeghel spoke on "European American Relations: French Perspectives" during an event co-sponsored by the Department of Sociology.

New Faculty Arrive at College of Law

As the summer winds down, life at the College of Law continues. Two new faculty members have joined the law school family this summer and two more will be visiting on the Columbus campus. In addition, the College said farewell to a favorite professor and Dean of Student Affairs.

Josh Stulberg, Professor of Law, comes from the University of Missouri-Columbia, where he has been Professor of Law and Director of Advanced Studies. He holds Ph.D. and M.A. degrees from The University of Rochester and a

Sarah Rudolph Cole

J.D. from New York University School of Law. He will be teaching in the area of dispute resolution.

Josh Stulberg

Sarah Rudolph Cole, Assistant Professor, received a J.D. from the University of Chicago. She also will teach in the area of dispute resolution. She comes from Creighton University School of Law, Omaha, Nebraska and has been a visiting professor at the University of Oklahoma College of Law.

Two visiting professors will be part of the College of Law family next year. Jeffrey T. Ferriell, of the Capital University Law School faculty, and Martha Chamallas, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Law, will be teaching classes at Ohio State.

Professor and administrator, Nancy B. Rapoport, assumed the position of Dean of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Law in August. She had been a faculty member at Ohio State since 1991 and Associate Dean for Student Affairs since 1996.

Promotions and tenure approved by the O.S.U. Board of Trustees include:

- Professor Edward B. Foley promoted to the rank of Full Professor.
- Professor Peter P. Swire, promoted to the rank of Full Professor with tenure.
- Professor Kathy S. Northern, promoted to the rank of Associate Professor with tenure.

On the staff side, Tara Scott was named Outstanding Staff Person of the Year by Dean Gregory H. Williams. He praised her for her cooperative spirit as he made the presentation during the annual faculty and staff year-end luncheon.

Tara is responsible for purchasing, reimbursements, reconciliation of law school accounts, and student wages. She came to the College of Law three years ago from the College of Dentistry, where she was the supervisor of the insurance office. She has worked at the University for 18 years.

Other staff activities include:

- Liz Cutler Gates was named to the position of Director of Communications. She joined the staff of the College in August 1996 as Staff Assistant for Alumni and Development. In her new position, she is responsible for all College of Law communications and media relations.
- A long-time employee of the College, Martha Six, resigned in early June to move to northern Michigan. An office associate in the library's administrative offices, Martha had worked at the College for 14 years.
- Library staff on the move this summer include Jennifer Larraguibel, who took a position as Reference Librarian with the library at the new law school at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, and Greg Frohnsdorff, who became Acquisitions Librarian in the Daniel Library at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C.

New faces at the College of Law include:

- Dee LaPaugh, the part-time secretary in the legal clinic. She comes to Ohio State from the Great Southern License Agency in Columbus.
- Shirley A. Craley, who joined the legal clinic as Office Associate in late May. She comes to the law school from O.S.U. Hospitals where she worked in the Department of Psychiatry. A University employee since 1989, she replaces long-time clinic secretary, Debbie Crane, who resigned to move to North Carolina with her recently-retired husband.
- Vicki Payne, the new Administrative Secretary in the Law Library. She comes to the law school from the Department of Plant Biology, where she worked as a secretary for the past four years.
- Cybele Smith, Assistant Placement Director. She received a B.A. degree from O.S.U. and a J.D. degree from Capital University Law School. Most recently, she worked as the membership director at the Columbus Bar Association.
- Jennifer Beadnell, secretary in the admissions office. A recent graduate of O.S.U. with a B.A. degree in History, she is originally from the Canton, Ohio, area. While an undergraduate, she worked in the office of College of Law Registrar Lee Mangia.
- Tina Spurlock, secretary in the Journals office. Joining the staff in early August, she comes to Ohio State from the law offices of Bloomfield and Kempf. She also held a variety of positions in the OSU library system. She is also a recent graduate of Ohio State with a B.S. degree in Social Work.
- David Genzen, reference/audio-visual services librarian. A recent graduate of Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, he also has an M.L.I.S. degree from Florida State and a B.A. degree from Ohio State. □

HELPING UNDERSTAND THE MEANING OF THE LAW

"My experience in the practice of law suggested to me that lawyers and judges, for the most part, make up their minds without knowing what the facts are," says Marshall Cox '59. "The socioeconomic aspect offers a great deal to understanding what law really means and consequently, that's the area that I feel is deserving of some support."

Cox and his wife, Nathalie, have designated $50,000 to establish the Marshall and Nathalie Cox Fund for the Socio-Legal Center at the College of Law.

"I'm very interested in the kinds of work the Socio-Legal Center is doing," notes Cox, who practiced law in New York City for more than 30 years. "The kinds of issues that the Socio-Legal Center is looking at, what the facts are and the actual consequences of court actions as opposed to what everybody expects, are very important."

Marshall has long been a believer in the work of the Center," says Professor Barbara Snyder, Director of the Socio-Legal Center. Their support has been great. We are using the gift for an endowment fund to assist in the long-term operation of the Center. We are pleased to name the research suite in their honor.

A Cleveland native, Cox came to the College of Law in the fall of 1954. "I knew I was going to practice law in Ohio, and it seemed to me to be the best law school in Ohio," he recalls. Enrolled in summer school in 1955 before leaving for a two-year obligation to the military, he saw Professor R. L. Stanger in the hall one day. It was a meeting that would change the course of his career.

"He said, 'I understand you are going into the Army,'" Cox recalls. "I said, 'Yes.' He said, 'You're coming back, aren't you.' I said, 'Oh, yes.'"

The professor questioned him about his plans after graduation. "Well, I'll try to get a job in one of the Cleveland firms," was the student's reply.

"Have you ever thought about New York?" Stanger questioned. I said, 'No,'" Cox recalls. "He said, 'Well, you ought to think about it.'"

"Stanger had worked with a New York firm," explains Cox. "He thought it was a good place to practice law. Of course, I had never been east of Pittsburgh."

The conversation stayed with him over the next two years as he completed his Army stint in Korea. Returning to Columbus, he immersed himself in law studies. He served as Editor of the Ohio State Law Journal, graduated with Order of the Coif honors in 1958, and moved to New York City following graduation.

His first job was as an associate at Cahill Gordon and Reindel, the venerable New York law firm. There he built a career as a litigator, working in the area of antitrust law. He retired from the same firm as a partner at the end of 1997.

Although he has spent the 40 years since graduation in New York, he has maintained a strong relationship to the College of Law, including service as a member of the National Alumni Council. "I feel I have a tremendous obligation to this place," he says. "It did great things for me." □

Cincinnati law alumni gathered in early June to recognize Professor Gregory Travalio with the first Procter & Gamble Faculty Excellence Award, sponsored by College of Law graduates who work at the Cincinnati-based company. A reception was held at the home of James Johnson '72, senior vice president and general counsel for Procter & Gamble. Among those participating in the award were (front, left to right) Steve Jemison '73, Rose Dabek '75, W. Stanley Morton '72, Kim Zerby '84, Dean Gregory H. Williams, Professor Travalio, (back, left to right) Dave Grayson '66, Terry Overby '73, Jason Camp '98, Dave DeVita '78, Steve Miller '72, Ithamar D. Weed '39, Bob Watkins '53, and Johnson. □

Class of 1998 Encouraged to be "Lawyer Heroes"

Roberta Cooper Ramo, the first woman president of the American Bar Association, encouraged Class of 1998 to choose to use the law to solve problems and not create chaos.

"As a lawyer you have enormous power," she said. "You can use it for right or as a weapon for your own good and not necessarily your clients."

Her words came as the graduating class received their academic hoods on May 16. The ceremony was held at the historic Ohio Theatre in downtown Columbus.

Ms. Ramo challenged the graduates to be a "lawyer as hero. You will also be 'lawyer as happy, fulfilled person,'" she added.

"In this most heterogeneous society the world has ever seen, in a day when national boundaries increasingly have no meaning, in which the power of the government can be oppressive, we never have enough lawyer heroes," she added. "We never have enough women and men of rock solid integrity who remember the day they graduated from law school, the day they passed the Bar and raised their hands promising to protect and defend the Constitution."

She also encouraged graduates to volunteer time to the Bar and churches and synagogues, to solve problems of communities and the nation, and teach children by example. "We never have enough lawyers teaching the music of justice," she stressed.

As she welcomed each to the profession, she also gave a word of caution:

Former president of the American Bar Association, Roberta Cooper Ramo, challenged the new graduates to fight for the ideals of the Constitution and keep the highest personal integrity.

"Don't forget the rest of life—your role as child, brother or sister, friend, husband or wife, and especially parent."

A magna cum laude graduate of the University of Colorado, Ms. Ramo earned a law degree from the University of Chicago (in the same class as Professor David Goldberger). Her diverse legal career has taken her from small firm and solo practice to partnership with New Mexico's largest law firm—Modrall, Sperling, Roehl, Harris, and Sisk.

As the 1995–1996 President of the American Bar Association, Ms. Ramo was the first woman to head the world's largest organization of attorneys in its history. While serving as President of ABA, she led a drive to further public understanding of the law and to improve the system of justice, including a vigorous defense of the Legal Services Corporation and the independence of the American Judiciary. She is currently co-chair of the ABA Model Mediation Project, along with Ohio Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas J. Moyer '64.

Also at the ceremony, Professor Morgan E. Shipman, the John W. Bricker Professor of Law, was recognized by the members of the graduating class for outstanding performance as a teacher, making him a five-time recipient the Outstanding Professor Award. (He was previously honored by graduating classes in 1971, 1980, 1981, and 1993.) A faculty member since 1969, he is a respected teacher who has profound mastery of his subjects. In 1971, he was one of six persons to receive the University-wide Distinguished Teaching Award.

Professor Shipman received B.B.A. and LL.B. degrees from the University of Texas. He finished first in his class both in the College of Business Administration and in law school. Prior to entering law teaching, he worked as an associate with Covington and Burling, and served as special counsel to the Securities and Exchange Commission, Office of Program Planning, in Washington, D.C.

In her first year as a staff member at the College of Law, Amy Y. Cooper was honored as Outstanding Staff Person. As assistant to the registrar, she professionally maintains the day-to-day operation of the registrar's window, including course registration, scheduling, and drop/add requests. Winning the Outstanding Staff Person award so early in her tenure at the College of Law is evidence of her ability and professional commitment to a career in student services.

She came to the College of Law on June 2, 1997 from The Ohio State University registrar's office in Lincoln Tower.

Ryan Scott Ferber, Columbus, presented the class gifts. An endowment fund has been established to provide a scholarship to a needy student. Funds were also designated toward the development of a case in which to display the composite photographs of the graduating classes. □

Twenty Years After Bakke

The Law and Social Science of Affirmative Action in Higher Education

Symposium Issue of the Ohio State Law Journal

Twenty years after the Supreme Court's historic decision in Bakke, affirmative action remains one of the most hotly contested legal and social issues in America. Last spring, scholars from around the country gathered at The Ohio State University College of Law to discuss the issue. Their work is now being published in a special edition of the Ohio State Law Journal, bringing together prominent law professors and social scientists to discuss the future of affirmative action in higher education. They look at what has been the impact of Bakke on minority students, white students, universities, and the professions. What would happen if affirmative action were eliminated? Are there alternatives to race-based preferences in university admissions? How are the courts likely to rule on future challenges to affirmative action plans?

Some of the nation's leading constitutional scholars included in the symposium issue are:

In Memoriam

The College of Law has received word of the deaths of these alumni and expresses sympathy to relatives and loved ones.

G. Harold Martin '23, a pioneer resident and civic leader in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., died Saturday, April 25 at the age of 97. A Florida resident since 1925, he practiced law and was involved in a variety of community activities. He is survived by two sons, Col. Jack W. Martin, Gainesville, Fla., and Maj. James R. Martin, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; one daughter, Mary M. Hayes, Windermere, Fla.; 11 grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; and two great great-grandchildren.

Lester S. Reid '30, died in October, 1997 in McAllen, Texas, following an extended illness. Formerly of Chillicothe, Ohio, he is survived by his daughter, Anita Reid West, McAllen, Tex., two grandsons, Michael Reid Flemming and Peter Todd Fleming, both of Boston, Mass., and a niece, Mrs. Virginia Pyle, Storrs, Conn.

Howard Courtland Park '31 died May 2 in Columbus at the age of 89. Two daughters, Martha P. Bowman of Bexley and Barbara P. Goldschmid of Colorado; seven grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren survive him.

William Page Lewis '37 died June 12, 1998 of an apparent heart attack. A familiar Statehouse figure, he was the former director of what is now the Legislative Service Commission. He was appointed to the commission's predecessor, the Legislative Reference Bureau by Ohio Governor Michael V. DiSalle in 1957. In that capacity, he wrote speeches, drafted resolutions and legislation, and served as a confidant to many members of the General Assembly and state administrations. He kept his post through four administrations. In later years, he served as a lobbyist for a variety of clients and enterprises. He is survived by his wife, Mary Ann; three sons, William Page III, Jeffrey Michael, and Peter Andrew; and a sister, Marie Williams.

Louis Berwitt '39 died April 13 at his home in Beachwood, Ohio. He was 85. He was a vice president and corporate counsel for the old Gray Drug Store chain until he reached the mandatory retirement age of 65. He then opened his own office and practiced corporate law until earlier this year. He is survived by his wife, Elaine, to whom he was married for 55 years; daughters, Marcia Hough, of Orrtana, Pa., and Bonnie J., of Cleveland; a son, Martin, of Beachwood; a sister; and three grandchildren.

Edward J. Cox, Sr. '39 died March 19 at the age of 86. He was retired from Cox and Stein Co., L.P.A., where he had been chairman. His wife, Mary Curtis; son, Edward J. Jr.; daughter, Rosemary G.; brother, Charles Q.; and niece, Shirley Chapman, survive him.

Charles S. Hendershot '39 died August 28, 1987 in Zanesville, Ohio. He is survived by his wife, Ada K.; two daughters, Patricia Price, Nashville, Tenn., and Sally Litwak, Denver, Col.; and four grandsons.

Henry W. Houston '42 died April 10 in Urbana, Ohio at the age of 79. He is survived by his wife of 51 years, F. Bobbie; daughter, Sharon Lee, Columbia, Md.; sons, Michael, of Boca Raton, Fla., Mark, of Palm Beach, Fla., Jeffrey, of Lafayette, Ind., and Eric, of Kent, Conn.; 11 grandchildren; aunt, Mrs. W. O. Greene, Urbana; and two nephews.

Leona Russell Babyak '48 died May 20, 1998 in Chapel Hill, N.C. She was 77. Retired from the Denville, N.J. public schools, she is survived by sons, Mark, of Washington, D.C., and Gregory R., of Falls Church, Va.; daughters, Blythe Holbrooke, of New York City, and Andrea Grega, of Flanders, N.J.; and one grandson.

Stuart Dobbie Eagleson '48 died November 3, 1997 in Columbus on his 79th birthday. He was a practicing attorney for more than 50 years with the family law firm of Eagleson, Eagleson, Eagleson. He is survived by his wife of 31 years, Doris S.; sons, Stuart M. and Geoffrey M., both of

Jeffrey L. Hayman '80

Jeffrey Lloyd Hayman '80 died June 4, 1998 in Boca Raton, Fla. He was 42. A member of the College of Law's National Alumni Council, he is remembered as a great campaigner, an irrepressible optimist, and a tough negotiator who wouldn't take no for an answer. Even when battling cancer, he maintained an upbeat attitude.

A deputy general counsel for JM Family Enterprises in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., he joined the company in 1994 following stints as a corporate counsel for Mead Corp. in Dayton, Ohio, and as an associate at Simpson, Thacher, and Bartlett, a New York law firm.

In addition to receiving a J.D. degree, he also earned a bachelor's degree in social sciences from Ohio State. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and served as managing editor of the Ohio State Law Journal from 1979-1980.

While in Dayton, he was a trustee of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Greater Dayton and formed and chaired the Dayton Bar Association's Committee on Public Perception of Lawyers. More recently, he served on the board of trustees of Planned Parenthood of Broward and South Palm Beach counties and also on the board of the Youth Automotive Training Center. In addition, he gave his time to the Boy's and Girl's Clubs of Broward County and JM Family's Camping Unlimited Program, which sends disadvantaged youth to summer camp.

He is survived by his wife, Janet; a son, Scott; and a daughter, Michelle; his parents, Milton and Sippy Hayman, Steubenville, Ohio; and a sister, Sherri Hayman, of Steubenville.

Honor Roll of Volunteers

The day-to-day activities of a law school would not be as complete without the involvement of volunteers. From judging moot court teams and speaking in classes to organizing class reunions and writing letters to prospective students, volunteers are an important part of life at the College of Law. Their involvement is wide-ranging and far-reaching and many individuals have volunteered more than once in the past year. In this issue of the Law Record, we recognize those individuals who have willingly offered their time and expertise during the last school year so that others may benefit.

We have tried to compile as complete a list as possible. Given the number of people who are involved in the College on a day-to-day basis, we realize that some volunteers may have inadvertently been omitted. If that is the case, please accept our deepest apologies and be assured that any oversight is not intentional.

Federal Courthouse Renamed in Honor of Metzenbaum

The historic federal courthouse on Public Square in Cleveland has been renamed to honor former Senator Howard M. Metzenbaum '41 (D-OH). During a ceremony on May 27, the courthouse was dubbed the Howard M. Metzenbaum U.S. Courthouse on Public Square.

Joining the former senator at the ceremony were government officials and judges, along with family and friends. Attorney General Janet Reno was the keynote speaker.

Metzenbaum served in the U.S. Senate for 19 years before retiring in 1995.

The five-story building, with its Corinthian columns and beaux-arts entablatures, was completed at a cost of $3.3 million in 1910, seven years before Metzenbaum was born in a little frame house on the east side of Cleveland. The building was originally known as the U.S. Post Office, Custom House and Court House. It will house the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in 2001, when a new federal courthouse is completed on West Superior Avenue.

Robert Duncan Joins Ohio State Board of Trustees

Longtime Ohio judge Robert M. Duncan '52, who recently served as a senior administrator at The Ohio State University, has been appointed to a nine-year term on the university's Board of Trustees.

Duncan, of Columbus, was secretary of the Board of Trustees at Ohio State from January 1995 until his retirement in June 1996. Before that, he was vice president for legal affairs and general counsel at the university from 1992 to 1994.

Governor George V. Voinovich '61 announced Duncan's appointment to the board. He replaces Alex Shumate, whose term expired May 13.

Robert M. Duncan '52

Currently a jurist-in-residence in the College of Law, Duncan, 70, has a long and distinguished judicial career. From 1974 to 1985, he was a U.S. District Court judge for the Southern District of Ohio. Prior to that, he had been chief judge of the U.S. Court of Military Appeals, Ohio Supreme Court justice, and Franklin County Municipal Court judge.

He also served as chief counsel to the Attorney General of Ohio, chief of the Workers' Compensation Section of the Ohio Attorney General's office, and as an assistant attorney general for both the city of Columbus and the State. Before joining Ohio State, he was a partner in the Columbus law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis and Pogue.

Duncan has a volunteer appointment in the College of Law, teaching seminars in the process of judging and international law, specifically the use of force and the law of war. He said he will continue teaching as long as it does not conflict with his duties as a trustee.

A two-time graduate of Ohio State, Duncan also earned his bachelor's degree in 1948. The College of Law named him a Distinguished Alumnus in 1992 in recognition of his service and leadership to the school.

Law Grad on the Cutting Edge of Medicine

In the same month he graduated from medical school, Frank Stieg '75 argued a case before the Ohio Supreme Court. Rare, yes, but there is nothing ordinary about this alumnus, who started out wanting to practice law in Hamilton, Ohio and ended up as a successful plastic surgeon in Winter Park, Florida.

Stieg graduated from Ohio State with a B.S. in Biology in 1972 and a J.D. in 1975. Following a post-graduate stint researching medical/legal issues for an OSU professor in medicine and sociology, he returned to Hamilton to a private practice that included property disputes, a few personal injury claims, and 74 criminal cases. Thinking an M.D. would be the fast track back to academia, Stieg enrolled at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine.

What Stieg didn't realize was that a medical degree without a residency was worthless. "You don't really become a doctor until you've gone through additional training and practice," he says. "My wife always told me that I was going to be a surgeon. If I couldn't be a trial lawyer, I was going to be a surgeon because they have the same disposition. Of course, she was right."

The 1980s were a busy time for the Stiegs. Frank graduated from medical school, completed two residencies and was board certified in otolaryngology (head and neck surgery) in 1985 and plastic and reconstructive surgery in 1989. His wife, Sharon, completed law school at the University of Cincinnati, and the couple had three daughters: Shannon in 1983, Megan in 1984, and Gretchen in 1987.

A cosmetic surgery fellowship took Stieg to Miami. "One of the professors I had in plastic surgery had moved to Orlando, and he said, 'Oh, you've got to stop to see what our practice is like.' One thing led to another and I joined their practice; then six years ago I split from them and started my own." Stieg and his two partners now have the biggest plastic surgery practice in central Florida. The practice is approximately 90 percent reconstructive and 10 percent cosmetic. Of the reconstructive work, up to 25 percent is in pediatrics. He is affiliated with Florida Hospital, where he serves as secretary for the medical staff. In two years, he will become Chief of Staff for the hospital, a 1,478-bed, acute care facility with more than 1,600 physicians. He is also currently president-elect of the Orange County Medical Society.

The Hospital has an active outreach mission. Last year Stieg, accompanied by his then-ninth-grade daughter, Shannon, went with a medical team to Guatemala. The team performed 29 operations, primarily repairing cleft palates and aiding burned children. In April, Stieg's next oldest daughter, Megan, joined him on a similar mission in Northwest Brazil, where they did 35 surgeries, primarily cleft lips and palates.

Shannon and Megan have an interest in following their father's footsteps. Not long ago, they came to him with a time line for how they planned to take over his practice.

Stieg spends most of his spare time with his family. He serves as driver for his family's frequent water skiing outings, and last year he learned to downhill ski. One of his favorite outings is his annual golf trip to Wheeling, West Virginia with law school classmates

Tom Kahle of Cincinnati and Alec Wightman from Columbus.

And the disposition of the case before the Ohio Supreme Court? "I was sure I was right," he recalls "I can even remember talking to Professor (Bob) Lynn," says Stieg. But he lost—another rarity.

Grad Receives National Arts Award

A 1976 graduate of the College of Law has been named Arts Administrator of the Year by Arts Management, America's oldest national periodical for arts professionals. Larry R. Thompson, president and CEO of the Flint Cultural Center, was chosen because of his achievements during the 1996-97 years as he helped revitalize the community of Flint, Michigan.

Thompson is one of two national winners who were honored during an April ceremony at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. (The other honoree, for career service, is Steve Tennen, executive director of Arts Connection in New York City.)

"The most important thing is that the award means a great deal to the Cultural Center," Thompson said. "It gives the efforts we've been undertaking the kind of national prominence they deserve."

He is the former president of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland and has been in Flint since 1993, when he was tapped to head the new Cultural Center Corp.

Larry R. Thompson, '76

The corporation was founded by the Flint Board of Education and other community leaders to unite and manage the buildings and grounds of the 30-acre Cultural Center campus in the City of Flint. The campus is comprised of nine different cultural institutions and facilities: Bower Theater, the Flint Institute of Arts (an arts museum and museum art education programs), the Flint Institute of Music (Flint Symphony Orchestra and 2,800 student Flint School of Performing Arts), Flint Public Library, Flint Youth Theatre, Longway Planetarium (a 285-seat planetarium), Sarvis Conference Center, Sloan Museum (a history and science museum), and Whiting auditorium (a 2,000-seat performing arts venue).

Thompson is married to Pat Thompson, the Director of Special Events for the Hurley Hospital Foundation. He has three children: Eric (17) who lives in Columbus, Ohio, and Sarah (8) and Hunter (5), who both live in Flint.

Michael E. Flowers '79 was elected vice chair of the business law section of the American Bar Association. He is a partner in the Columbus law firm of Bricker and Eckler.

civil litigation with a focus on business and commercial litigation, medical malpractice, product liability and personal injury matters. Kris, his wife, Nancy '83, and their family live in Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

Appointed to the board of trustees of The Wilds is Gordon F. Litt '85. The Wilds is a 10,000-acre wildlife conservation center in southeastern Ohio. Litt is a partner in the law firm of Bricker and Eckler, Columbus.

Susan L. Rhiel '86, a partner with Thompson, Hine and Flory, L.L.P., has been appointed to the panel of Chapter 7 Trustees for the Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Columbus division. Trustees are appointed in each Chapter 7 bankruptcy case filed and are responsible for liquidating all non-exempt assets of the debtor and using the funds to pay creditors. They are also responsible for investigating the financial affairs of the debtor and examining the debtor under oath at the meeting of creditors.

Susan L. Rhiel '86

Michael Edward Hatch '88 and his wife, Therese Carnes Hatch, welcomed the birth of daughter, Rory Kathryn Chandis on May 18, 1997. The family lives in Burke, Virginia.

Karen D. Wheel '88 will participate in a three-year national leadership program sponsored by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Karen D. Wheel '88

The program is designed to increase individuals' skills and insights into areas outside their chosen disciplines and help them address society's challenges creatively and effectively. She and 37 other applicants were chosen from a field of 747 applicants. Wheel is the director of development and external relations for the College of Human Ecology at The Ohio State University.

Matthew J. Thompson '88 has joined the firm of Weltman, Weinberg and Reis, Co., L.P.A. in the bankruptcy department. Most recently he was employed as an Assistant Attorney General in the bankruptcy unit for the State of Ohio and as General Counsel for the Ohio Student Aid Commission.

Jeopardy! Contestant Gets Second Chance

Pat Pauken '94, made his second appearance on the syndicated game show Jeopardy! Pauken returned to compete in the show in April, after his first appearance in January of last year was jinxed by a faulty buzzer.

His appearance on January 21, 1997 earned him a second place spot after his buzzer failed during the Double Jeopardy round. This time he appeared in two days of Jeopardy!, winning first prize and $7,200 in the first game, and second prize and a trip to the Canary Islands in the second game.

Pauken says preparing to be a contestant on Jeopardy! is like preparing for the bar exam because there are many things to try to memorize. He says he was more nervous about what categories might come up than the thought of being on television.

"My goal was to have a good time," he recalls. "I just wanted to be around for Final Jeopardy!" —By Jennifer Wright

Incorrect Addresses Lead to "Lost" Alumni

Whatever happened to Bill, who sat next to you in Con Law? Is Jen from the Law Journal still at that big firm in Atlanta? Your College of Law class reunion is the perfect time to catch up on the lives of those who were around you in law school. It's also a perfect opportunity to network professionally.

An outstanding round of reunions is planned this year, and we don't want anyone to miss getting together with their classmates. In an effort to let graduates know that their class is meeting, we discovered some of our alumni have turned up "lost." (This means we have an incorrect address or no address at all on our database.) If you know the location of classmates or friends on the list below, please forward the information to the College of Law Alumni Relations Office at (614) 292-2937 or fax to (614) 292-1383.

You may also mail the information to 104 John Deaver Drinko Hall, 55 West 12th Avenue, Columbus, OH 43210 or send an e-mail to lawalum@lists.acs.ohio-state.edu. □
